

NOTABLE WOMEN

Plucky Explorers and Travelers of Feminine Sex.

ENDURANCE EQUAL TO MAN

Travel Through Quarters of Globe Where White Man Has Never Been Seen—Another Has Been Around the World Six Times—Famous Woman Teachers.

Miss Martha Craig, a brilliant and brave young woman, has made remarkable explorations in lands of which little is known. Two years ago she returned from a journey of 500 miles in a canoe in Canada. She made the journey alone with two Indian guides, whom she trusted perfectly and who, perhaps for that reason, were as faithful as two guardian angels.

Miss Craig penetrated far into the Canadian wilderness, where few white persons ever venture. She was rewarded by a series of thrilling adventures and intensely interesting information in regard to Indians yet uncontaminated by the influence of the white man. She declares she found these "savages" in some respects better than the average civilized man is. Investigations among the Offways show that they, too, have traditions of a great deliverer and redeemer who descended from heaven as a man to save the earth's people from being destroyed by their own wickedness. The Indian savior had, however, a wife, the divine woman, who came from heaven with him. His name was Mitchiwabun.

Last summer Miss Craig went to Labrador, obtaining many photographs and taking notes of the wild scenery and sparse life there. Returning, she came near going down in a shipwreck. This plucky and gifted woman has some original ideas. For one thing, she says the masculine sex is stupefying itself with tobacco and meat.

Jessie Ackerman.

The champion woman traveler of the world is Miss Jessie Ackerman, missionary, explorer and lecturer. She has been all around the globe six times, has lived among cannibals and visited the king of the Ainos, the aborigines of Japan.

The little Ainos interested the woman traveler as much as any people she saw. Specimens of this strange race were on exhibition at the St. Louis fair. Their bodies are covered with a growth of hair like that on an animal, which gives the small people an uncanny look. The women have blue mustaches tattooed upon their upper lips. When an Aino girl is married a bar is tattooed across her forehead and another around her wrist, perhaps so she can never pass herself off for single.

Fifty Years a Teacher.

There lately retired from public school No. 21, Brooklyn, its principal, Miss Kate E. McWilliams, after fifty years' active service as a teacher. She had been a principal forty-eight years, which is said to be the lengthiest record of any American at least in such capacity.

Miss McWilliams has a rare, sweet face which bears little mark of age. A teacher who has been acquainted with her many years says of her: "She was the loveliest woman I have ever known. Miss McWilliams had a remarkable power of discipline and maintaining order in a school, that, too, by her simple word and presence."

She retires on a pension of $1,250 a year, half her salary as principal.

Miss Gill's Opinion.

Miss Laura Drake Gill, A. M., is dean of Barnard college, the woman's branch of Columbia university. Besides being an American college graduate she also studied at the universities of Leipzig and Geneva and at the Sorbonne, Paris. Dean Gill in a recent address declared it is not college women who seek divorce from their husbands. Thoroughly disciplined mentally, the college bred girl looks on marriage as a "serious chance for service." At the same time college women demand a high standard in man. "The world needs a propaganda of work," says Dean Gill.

Mrs. Ella Hamilton Durley.

The editor in chief of the Chicago woman's daily, the Review, has had ample newspaper training and has, besides, ideas original with herself. For one thing Mrs. Ella Hamilton Durley declares herself unalterably opposed to making a newspaper a criminal calendar. She is for printing "all the news that is good news." Mrs. Durley went from Iowa to Chicago. She was formerly editor of a department on a Des Moines paper.

HOUSE FURNISHINGS.

Selecting Furniture, Cleaning Floors and Renovating Carpets.

Sunlight, ventilation and cheerfulness are the first points to be considered in thinking out the furnishings of a home, and whatever interferes with these is always avoided by the wise homemaker. Dust destroys the purity of air, therefore an overabundance of drapery and trivial bric-a-brac must be ruled out.

Heavy, cumbersome furniture and uncomfortable chairs are also to be rigidly ruled out. In America especially "nothing is permanent but change." We move about so much, usually for business reasons, that it is not worth while to count on remaining in any one house. Consequently it is best to purchase the lightweight, pretty furniture that can easily be taken from place to place. Such furniture of course includes metal beds, brass and enameled iron. These have the additional recommendation of affording less of a harbor for vermin.

Then there are the attractive, artistic chairs, settees and couches of bamboo, rush, prairie grass and split reed. They are so light in weight that a child may move them, yet strong enough to hold the very fat man. They can be made as soft and luxurious with cushions as one desires. The cushions can be taken into the sun and beaten and thoroughly cleansed, as stuffed and padded chairs never can be. Perhaps almost the only heavy articles in a house should be the piano and dining table. Wooden furniture is now often so badly made and of such badly seasoned wood that it is to be avoided.

Linen and Drapery.

The heavy white hand embroidered linen now used for best bedspreads and tablecloths is a delight to the artistic sense. Women who can embroider can decorate their own spreads and tablecloths.

It is to be hoped the present floral patterns of wall paper, curtains and chair and cushion covers will long remain in vogue. The light background, with designs of roses and other blossoms stamped over it, is a perpetual incentive to cheerfulness.

Cleaning and Staining Floors.

After a floor has been scrubbed if a little turpentine is added to the rinsing water it will leave a delightfully fresh and fragrant odor in the room. Floor stains may be made at home. For oil mix together a pint of boiled linseed oil, a gill and a half of turpentine, three tablespoonfuls of raw amber and three tablespoonfuls of whiting. For mahogany mix together one pint of boiled oil, a gill and a half of turpentine.

DINING TABLE WITH EMBROIDERED CLOTH. Fine, three tablespoonfuls of burned sienna, three tablespoonfuls of whiting, half a tablespoonful of yellow ochre, half a tablespoonful of Bismarck brown and half a tablespoonful of aniline black. It is advisable to try the stain on a little piece of board before staining the floor. The color may be deepened or lessened by increasing or diminishing the coloring matter. The stain should be rubbed into the floor with a brush, and after a day or two, when it is quite dry, the floor should be rubbed hard with a soft cloth. When washing waxed or polished floors a little petroleum added to the water will greatly improve the appearance. An excellent polish is made by well mixing together equal parts of boiled linseed oil, turpentine, vinegar and spirits of wine. Apply the polish thinly with a piece of flannel and finally rub with a soft cloth. When washing polished floors the cloth should be wrung out as dry as possible, the floor being then rubbed with a dry cloth.

Renovating Carpets.

After a carpet has been well shaken and beaten it may be washed with carpet soap, its improved appearance well repaying the trouble. A faded carpet can be brightened after it has been shaken by rubbing it with a cloth wrung out of ammonia and water in the proportion of a teaspoonful of ammonia to a gallon of water, turning and rinsing the cloth as it gets soiled. The water will need frequent changing. To remove blacklead stains cover them with a paste made of fuller's earth and water to which a little ammonia has been added. Leave till dry and then brush off. If necessary make a second application. Grease may be removed from the carpet by spreading thick brown paper over the spot and ironing with a hot iron.

DORA BELLE DENNISON.

A Girl Librettist.

A very young lady, Miss Doris Franklyn of New York city, has written an opera of fairies. Its successful first performance was a flattering tribute to the talent of a girl scarcely past sixteen. The young author is yet not enough to the age when we believe in fairies to represent them in a living, real way, and perhaps that is why her opera was so successful. Will Miss Franklyn later be the American woman who is to write a great opera, and is this a beginning?

Indigestion, constipation, dyspepsia, kidney and liver disorders, and all stomach troubles positively cured by using cents, Tea or Tablets, at Frank Hart's drug store.
